Nearly a score of local groups across the country, most operating under the name of Committee of Racial Equality, are affiliated with CORE. In one way or another they have ended discriminatory practices in restaurants, theaters, swimming pools, and recreation areas in many localities.

While each local group is independent and self-governing in every respect, all have accepted a discipline and a pattern of action that identify them as CORE affiliates.

The discipline requires a strict adherence to nonviolence, in both word and act, even when violence is initiated by the other party to the dispute. Violence is self-defeating, and nowhere more so than when used by a minority group. An attitude of good will and reconciliation, on the other hand, has positive values in winning public support, non-interference by police, and even the friendship and respect of the opposition.

The pattern of action assures that before any direct action is begun, a CORE group first investigates the suspected area of discrimination; then seeks through discussion with the persons involved to bring about a change of policy; after that appeals to the public for support; attracts wide attention to the unjust policy by demonstrations such as picketing, etc; and finally, if none of these has succeeded, begins the use of non-cooperation techniques such as sit-downs in restaurants, or “don’t buy where you can’t work” campaigns.

Locations of existing CORE groups are listed in this leaflet. If there is one in your vicinity, you can help the struggle for brotherhood by joining it, or contributing to its work, today. If there is no CORE group near by, you may wish to help with organizing one. Advice and help in such action are available from:

OFFICERS

- Billie Ames, Chairman
- Robert Kirk, Vice-Chairman
- Ina Sugihara, Secretary
- Catharine Raymond, Treasurer
- George M. Houser, Executive Director
- Marion Coddington, Field Representative
- James L. Farmer, Field Representative
- Harriett A. Lane, Field Representative
- Wallace F. Nelson, Field Representative
- Charles R. Oldham, Field Representative

ADVISORY COMMITTEE

- Roger N. Baldwin
- Allan Knight Chalmers
- Harold J. Gibbons
- E. Stanley Jones
- Will Moslow
- Dorothy Maynor
- Goodwin Watson
- A. J. Muste
- A. Philip Randolph
- Ira DeA. Reid
- Arnold M. Rose
- George S. Schuyler
- Lillian Smith
- Howard Thurman

AFFILIATES

- Chicago, Illinois
- Cincinnati, Ohio
- Cleveland, Ohio
- Columbus, Missouri
- St. Louis, Missouri
- Washington, D.C.
- New York, New York
- Omaha, Nebraska
- Pasadena, California
- Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania
- St. Louis, Missouri

NATIONAL OFFICE

513 West 166th Street, New York 32, N.Y.
Many methods have been used by the men and women who have fought through the years to end the evil old pattern of racial segregation and discrimination. Education, legislation, integration—all these have had their place, and all have had their accomplishments.

The Congress of Racial Equality (CORE), a federation of local interracial groups, uses all of them, but points them up with a dramatic new and violent direct action.

CORE educates for racial justice by practicing racial justice. Acknowledging that discriminatory laws and precedents are wrong, CORE members and groups bring direct action into play by a program of active non-cooperation with such laws and practices.

And even in the midst of the most strenuous—and most dangerous—projects, CORE members endeavor to maintain always an approach of nonviolence and good will, seeking to persuade rather than compel their antagonists to move over into the brighter world of equality.

---

LEAVES from an album of activity

State College, Penna.

When no local barber shop could be found that would take a non-discriminating stand with regard to its customers, the Council on Racial Equality helped establish a new one owned by Mark J. Butler (at extreme right chair).

Washington, D.C.

Members of CORE’s annual interracial workshop take on a Jim Crow moving-picture theatre in the nation’s capitol.

St. Louis, Mo.

The Committee of Racial Equality “sit down” in an attempt to bring democracy to the lunch counter of a well-known chain store.
a new road to racial justice

CORE

STATE HISTORICAL SOCIETY OF WISCONSIN
816 State Street 53706
Madison, Wisconsin

THE STORY OF THE CONGRESS OF RACIAL EQUALITY
Many methods have been used by the men and women who have fought through the years to end the evil old pattern of racial segregation and discrimination. Education, legislation, persuasion—all these have had their place, and all have had their accomplishments.

The Congress of Racial Equality (CORE), a federation of local interracial groups, uses all of them, but points them up with a dramatic new element—nonviolent direct action.

CORE educates for racial justice by practicing racial justice. Acknowledging that discriminatory laws and practices are wrong, CORE members and groups bring direct action into play by a program of active non-cooperation with such laws and practices.

Applauding the passage of legislation against discrimination, CORE groups organize test projects to make sure that the laws are being observed and enforced.

And even in the midst of the most strenuous—and most dangerous—projects, CORE members endeavor to maintain always an approach of nonviolence and good will, seeking to persuade rather than compel their antagonists to move over into the brighter world of equality.
State College, Penna.

When no local barber shop could be found that would take a non-discriminating stand with regard to its customers, the Council on Racial Equality helped establish a new one owned by Mark J. Butler (at extreme right chair).

Washington, D.C.

Members of CORE's annual Interracial Workshop take on a Jim Crow moving-picture theatre in the nation's capital.

St. Louis, Mo.

The Committee of Racial Equality "sits down" in an attempt to bring democracy to the lunch counter of a well known chain store.
Nearly a score of local groups across the country, most operating under the name of Committee of Racial Equality, are affiliated with CORE. In one way or another they have ended discriminatory practices in restaurants, theaters, swimming pools, and recreation areas in many localities.

While each local group is independent and self-governing in every respect, all have accepted a discipline and a pattern of action that identify them as CORE affiliates.

The discipline requires a strict adherence to nonviolence, in both word and act, even when violence is initiated by the other party to the dispute. Violence is self-defeating, and nowhere more so than when used by a minority group. An attitude of good will and reconciliation, on the other hand, has positive values in winning public support, non-interference by police, and even the friendship and respect of the opposition.

The pattern of action assures that before any direct action is begun, a CORE group first investigates the suspected area of discrimination; then seeks through discussion with the persons involved to bring about a change of policy; after that appeals to the public for support; attracts wide attention to the unjust policy by demonstrations such as picketing, etc; and finally, if none of these has succeeded, begins the use of non-cooperation techniques such as sit-downs in restaurants, or “don't buy where you can’t work” campaigns.

Locations of existing CORE groups are listed in this leaflet. If there is one in your vicinity, you can help the struggle for brotherhood by joining it, or contributing to its work, today. If there is no CORE group near by, you may wish to help with organizing one. Advice and help in such action are available from

Officers

Billie Ames . . . . . . . Chairman
Robert Kirk . . . . . . Vice-Chairman
Ina Sugihara . . . . . . Secretary
Catharine Raymond . . . . . . Treasurer
George M. Houser . . . . . . Executive Director
Marion Coddington . . . . . Field Representative
James L. Farmer . . . . . Field Representative
Harriett A. Lane . . . . . Field Representative
Wallace F. Nelson . . . . . Field Representative
Charles R. Oldham . . . . . Field Representative

Advisory Committee

Roger N. Baldwin
Allan Knight Chalmers
Harold J. Gibbons
E. Stanley Jones
Will Maslow
Dorothy Maynor
Goodwin Watson
A. J. Muste
A. Philip Randolph
Ira DeA. Reid
Arnold M. Rose
George S. Schuyler
Lillian Smith
Howard Thurman

Affiliates

Chicago, Illinois
Cincinnati, Ohio
Cleveland, Ohio
Columbia, Missouri
Evanston, Illinois
Minneapolis, Minnesota
New York, New York
Omaha, Nebraska
Pasadena, California
Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania
St. Louis, Missouri
Washington, D. C.