Freedom movies coming to Selma U.

Freedom movies will be shown on the Selma U. campus this week. The administration has approved of showing these movies in the chapel. The first film will be "The Nashville Sit-In Story" about the 1960 student movement where men like James Bevel got their start. When the time is set for the movies, it will be announced. There will be no charge.

Student petition needs signing.

A student petition outlining campus grievances will be presented to the Selma U.'s Board of Trustees at their meeting April 22, 1965. Students are asked to read and sign the petition, which will be available on campus today.

Afternoon meetings to continue.

The student's discussions, which have been held on the front campus, will resume today at 4:30 p.m. Students are invited to attend and discuss anything they feel they can not discuss freely elsewhere.
