Freedom Information Service
P.O. Box 366
Edwards, Mississippi 39066
This is a proposal to establish a Freedom Information Service (F.I.S.) in Mississippi. This Service is to be used by people and organizations in the civil rights Movement to promote wide sharing of information, ideas and experiences between all the people who do or want to participate. Information will be gathered and organized for wide distribution by a library center and will be distributed primarily through a series of workshops all over the state. The FIS would establish and service local workshops by supplying them with resource materials in various forms as these materials are requested by workshop participants or planners. The center would also be available to service workshops set up by other Movement organizations, projects, and programs.

This is a staff proposal of the Delta Ministry, a Commission of the Division of Christian Life and Mission of the National Council of Churches of Christ in the U.S.A.

INTRODUCTION

The activity of the Movement has forced the world at long last to open its eyes and see the heretofore concealed picture of Mississippi and the unjust plight of its Negro "citizens." This opening up of national communications has led perhaps to the national pressure which produced a few changes or increased possibilities for change.

These changes are more apparent than real, however. The conscience of the nation is now tired of being pricked. It wants to read only of progress made, real or otherwise. It needs to be secure in the belief that it will no longer be painfully guilty over beatings in Selma, Alabama, or killings in Philadelphia, Mississippi.

The public grows comfortable with things like the voting rights law, the poverty program, and token desegregation of the schools, and wants to call this horror story to a happy ending. But the Movement in Mississippi and the local Negroes it represents know that this is simply a time for new chapters to be written - chapters which hopefully spell out a story of real change.

The mass media played a significant role in arousing and then easing the conscience of the nation. And in Mississippi it plays an equally significant role in the thoroughly selected reality it presents. The almost complete lack of relevant information printed or broadcast, along with notoriously deliberate misrepresentation and misinterpretation, has led not only to an uninformed public but to a misinformed one.

Materials published by the federal government purporting to help the poor are inaccessible to them because the system has kept them in the fields instead of the classroom, and they simply can't read the words. Those who can read find the materials overwhelmingly complex and full of red-tape, and the poor discover that "Yassuhing" middle-class Negroes have been appointed by whites to local administrative boards, if the boards are integrated at all.

Even within the Movement, the speed and intensity of the struggle thus far has led to an almost inevitably large information gap between Movement leadership and followers. Negroes in Mississippi don't need to be reminded of their continued dissatisfaction, sufferings, and fears as does the rest of the country. They can write that story themselves.

What they must have, however, is meaningful access to the information and experiences necessary to write a new story.

The Movement's understandable preoccupation with the swift accomplishment of the necessary has left these equally necessary tasks of education and communication virtually undone.

It should be understood that there are extraordinarily resourceful individuals in local black communities - people who have learned a great deal from their own experiences. At the same time, the ever more specialized structures and programs of the Movement leave the leaders only narrow access to this human wealth at the local level, where strong, intelligent people are dealing with target problems every day of their lives. The difficulty in getting information to and from the local people at this time results in much being lost on both sides.

The overriding problem is that resourceful people have expanded their ideas in virtual isolation from one another, without the opportunity to share in the important experience of confidently articulating their ideas - aware that they have something to teach.

Many of us who are concerned about this believe that there is a significant and useful relation between knowledge about a situation, sense of involvement in it, and real power to do something about it. It is the local Mississippian's sense of involvement, his personal concern for his world, his respect for his own inner resources and proficiencies (despite the white man's assessment) which the Movement must now work to increase so that people can begin to actually participate in the shaping of those laws and processes which govern their lives.

Perhaps this task can be best begun by increasing the local Mississippian's knowledge - that is, widening his access to the kind of information, ideas, and experiences upon which Movement leadership bases its decisions. And perhaps that educational task can best begin at the level where people are; that is, by giving people information about the things which they themselves feel are most important to their lives and their struggle for a better life.

PROPOSAL

Below is outlined a program for the creation, collection and dissemination of information in the areas of knowledge that are relevant to the Mississippi Movement.

It is an educational program, though an unusual one in that the "curriculum" is determined and in large part created by the students rather than the teachers.

It is actually a communications system which gathers materials into a central place, organizes and works with them to finally transmit useful information in appropriate forms to an increasing number of Mississippians.

The Movement is now beginning to build activities on the assumption that knowledge, efficiently shared, could become one of its basic tools for organizing, recruiting and acting for change with all of the people of the state.

Those of us working with the Freedom Information Service agree with this approach. We consider expanded communication to be absolutely essential to the further progress of the Movement of legally and economically disfranchised Americans to mold a world for themselves and all people.

I. IT IS THEREFORE PROPOSED:

A. THAT CITIZENSHIP WORKSHOPS BE ESTABLISHED IN MISSISSIPPI COMMUNITIES WHICH WOULD SERVE THE MOVEMENT BY PERFORMING THE FOLLOWING FUNCTIONS:

1. Provide an environment where people could participate in discussions on topics relevant to the Movement as it exists in their particular community, using all the resources which the Information Service (see I. B.) could provide.
2. Provide a means by which local people could create and distribute various kinds of materials relating their own ideas and experiences of the Movement at any level.

3. Provide a community forum which is not specialized to any particular Movement organization or program.

B. THAT A CENTER BE ESTABLISHED TO SERVICE THESE WORKSHOPS AND OTHER PROJECTS AND PROGRAMS BY PERFORMING THE FOLLOWING FUNCTIONS:

1. Maintain a library of relevant materials.

2. Publish periodical bibliographies of library materials and important information available elsewhere.

3. Maintain a file of sources of materials to be found in books, magazines, films, film strips, pamphlets, tape recordings, resource persons, other libraries, etc.

4. Reproduce current materials and composite background information and original articles.

5. Incorporate writing, film strips, tape recordings done by people in the workshops into original and theoretical and background materials.

6. Coordinate formal research projects to compile accurate information on Mississippi politics, economics, culture, etc.

7. Distribute any materials or information available in the Center free of charge to workshops, individuals, projects as requested, including reprints of less accessible material and rewrites in forms appropriate to recipients.

II. SOME DETAILS OF OPERATION:

A. CITIZENSHIP WORKSHOPS - ESTABLISHMENT:

1. Initial workshops with area, district, or state-wide attendance will be held at Mount Beulah. They will be scheduled by the Service Directors (see III. B.) with the recommendations of the Service Advisory Board (see III. A.) and the center staff. Workshop participants will be encouraged to coordinate workshops in their own
4. Collect relevant books, magazines, films, filmstrips, slides, photographs, pamphlets, tapes, records, posters, leaflets, buttons, stickers, etc. produced in or out of state.

5. Coordinate formal research on the situation of the Mississippi Negro.

6. Collect all available new materials produced by Mississippians which are relevant to the Movement.

7. Encourage writing on the development of the Movement in various areas, problems, encountered, methods used, learnings.

8. Encourage individuals to evaluate persons, trends, events, development, prospectus for the Movement.

9. Encourage writing on relationship of civil rights movement, especially in Mississippi, to other movements, political and economic systems.

10. Encourage original works on political and economic theory, especially as applied to the Mississippi Movement.

11. Establish a speakers bureau of resource people available to travel and speak on topics of importance to Mississippians.

12. Survey public libraries, private collections, offices, especially for materials not available for the center and keep a record of where they can be obtained.

13. Collect lists of materials available from other sources, as, catalogues of government publications, films, SDS writings, etc.

14. Make requests for subscriptions or donations of publications.

D. INFORMATION CENTER - ORGANIZATION:

1. Periodical publication of bibliography listing materials available in the center and in other collections and listing important articles in other publications.

2. Create handbooks on specific topics, places, aspects of the Movement by using excerpts from other materials, old and new.
3. Report on formal research findings.

4. Organize materials in the center cross-referenced by subject (agriculture, politics, labor, etc.) and author or distributor.

E. INFORMATION CENTER - DISTRIBUTION:

1. Develop a mailing list (headed by local workshop coordinators and existing projects, programs, and organizations in the state).

2. Reproduce materials requested by local workshops in bulk, so that each participant may have a copy of writings and access to films, tapes, etc.

3. Assist resource people in assembling written and audio-visual aids to their workshop presentations.

4. Regulate requests by distributing and processing workshop order sheets on which the coordinator can also list workshop-created materials to be sent to the center.

5. Set up a rotating team of center staff personnel to visit workshops in order to improve the quality of center materials and services.

III. PERSONNEL

A. ADVISORY BOARD

The Advisory Board will be responsible for determining staff policy and guidelines on when initial workshops will be scheduled and on what subject matter is most important to the Movement's progress. (For example, voter registration is considered the priority topic at this time. Thus when there are more workshop proposals than the Service can handle, those dealing with voter registration would probably be scheduled first.) The Board will also arbitrate any organizational conflicts which might affect Service programs.

The Board will be composed of representatives from all organizations in the Mississippi Movement and an evaluating team of educators and researchers. They will meet regularly to review the work of the Service, offer ideas and suggestions, and make recommendations for future workshops and Service policy.

Organizations which will be invited to send a representative to the Advisory Board include: The Brick Factory, the Congress of Racial Equality (CORE), the Delta Ministry, Medical Committee for Human Rights (MCHR), Mississippi Freedom Democratic Party (MFDP), Mississippi Freedom Labor Union (MFLU), Mississippi Student Union (MSU), National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP), Poor Peoples Corporation (PPC), the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee (SNCC), Southern Christian Leadership Conference (SCLC); Lawyers Committee for Civil Rights Under Law (President's Committee), Lawyers Constitutional Defense Committee (LCDC), NAACP Legal Defense and Education Fund, Inc. (Inc. Fund). It is hoped that these organizations will send their communications people to the Advisory Board.

The evaluating team will include two psychologists, one sociologist, one political scientist, and one Negro historian. This group will act as the research arm of the Advisory Board. They will make surveys of Service activities and programs in order to advise the Board on their policy recommendations. The team will also participate in the overall work of the Board as it attempts to solve the practical problems involved in getting more resources to and from more people.

November 7-8, 12 - Preparation of voter registration materials for an Edwards men's club.

November 10-14 - Preparation of materials for use in Bolivar County voter registration workshops.

The Workshops:

September 20-25 - Our first Citizenship Workshop since the establishment of the Freedom Information Service was held at Mount Beulah for about fifty people from Pike County, Amite County, Forrest County, and the Delta area. While the workshops concentrated on giving these people as much information as possible on a variety of subjects, they were also geared toward teaching the people how to run workshops in their own areas.

We dealt with topics such as community organizing, labor leadership, Mississippi politics, credit unions, etc. As resource people we had Mr. Cleveland Robinson from a New York local of the AFL-CIO; Mr. Miles Horton, head of Highlander Folk Center in Knoxville, Tennessee; Dr. A.J. Brodbeck, professor at the Yale Law School; and several people from the state who are working with various political and economic programs, such as the Mississippi Freedom Democratic Party and the Poor Peoples Corporation.

Every resource person in attendance felt that this was one of the better series of workshops they had seen - the people had great enthusiasm and interest, participation was tremendous. The workshops at Mount Beulah led to three follow-up local workshops. One of these has already been held and was also a success. The people at this workshop began by discussing leadership problems in their own community and in general. They plan to meet again, invite more people and continue the discussion. The level of interest was again unusually high. It is probable that some well thought out community action may come from this workshop.

October 22-24 - Two workshops were scheduled at Mount Beulah for this weekend. One was being held in cooperation... with the SCLC and dealt with very broad social and cultural areas in an attempt to relate them to the Movement. One hundred young teenagers from Natchez, Mississippi, (a current crisis area) attended. The weekend was planned as both an opportunity for creative discussion and as a respite from the tension of Natchez.

The other workshop program scheduled for this weekend was on the A.S.C.S. elections (see Appendix IV, B.). (The Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service is a federal program to help farmers get the highest price for their crops. Through crop allotment programs and education services, ASCS Committee members elected by farmers in their areas aid particularly the cotton production in the state.)

The workshop program was designed to inform Negroes who are interested in these elections about the structure of ASCS and about the very complicated election procedure. The people who attended returned to their own communities and worked on the election. They took with them a supply of 2-page pamphlets and a detailed handbook for them to use as a reference book in working on the elections. These two items were prepared by the Freedom Information Service staff. A filmstrip was also being produced and was subsequently used in local community workshops. Roberta Galler and several staff people from other organizations acted as resource people for these elections and visited workshops in many communities. Another pamphlet and campaign posters produced by S.N.C.C. was circulated in Mississippi through this workshop program.

November 6-7 - A second Natchez workshop was held on this weekend for another group of Natchez teenagers. This time the Service produced a Natchez Political Handbook and other written materials which were used as discussion guides and references during the workshops. We were very pleased with the quality and attractiveness of the written materials which were produced in bulk on two days' notice. Workshop leaders also praised them and requested more copies for use in Natchez.

November 13-14 - The projected ASCS candidates workshop will be held during this time. More detailed information on the structure and procedures of ASCS will be compiled into a candidates handbook. The candidates from various areas will also be given the opportunity to exchange ideas about what issues are involved, how to campaign effectively, and how they might support each other.

FREEDOM INFORMATION SERVICE

RESUME ON CITIZENSHIP WORKSHOPS ON THE ASCS (AGRICULTURAL STABILIZATION & CONSERVATION SERVICE) ELECTIONS OF 1965

I. Central Information and Training Workshop -- Mount Beulah, Edwards, Miss., October 22nd - 25th:

A. FORM

1. Present information on nature and function of ASCS locally and nationally and outline in detail the election procedure for community and county committeemen.

2. Discuss this information and plan means of passing it on to others throughout the state through preparation and distribution of material and setting up local workshops.

3. Coordination of workshops and election strategy should also be established by participants, with particular people being made responsible for specific areas of coordination.

B. PURPOSE

1. Prepare two local people from each county to distribute information on ASCS elections and to organize and conduct workshops and other ASCS activities in their own counties.

2. Establish and prepare a group of local people who are willing to travel throughout their congressional districts, distributing information, speaking at meetings, and organizing and coordinating ASCS workshops.

C. RESOURCE PEOPLE

1. Staff members who worked on ASCS elections last year.

2. Local people who organized the ASCS elections in their counties last year.

3. Possibly a few persons who worked on ASCS elections in other Southern states, e.g. Louisiana, Alabama, Georgia, Tennessee, etc.

4. One or two people from the Department of Agriculture to answer questions on the ASCS.
D. PARTICIPANTS

1. Two local people from each county who have committed themselves in advance to be responsible for setting up workshops in their county and perhaps others.

2. Local people available to travel, speak and coordinate workshops in their districts on almost full-time basis until December 2nd (two from 1st, 3rd and 4th districts and four to six from the 2nd district).

E. RESOURCE MATERIALS TO BE MADE AVAILABLE

1. Government pamphlets in large quantities - ASCS County handbooks, leaflets, complaint forms, etc.

2. Pamphlets and handbooks prepared by the Information Service.

3. Sample literature already produced by individual counties or used in other Southern states.

4. Filmstrip on ASCS produced by Bob Fletcher for the Freedom Information Service, which will make copies and projectors available to each district coordinator.

5. Maps of each county broken into ASCS communities.

6. Statistical breakdown by county of Negro farmers; crop maps to show where most cotton is grown.

II. Local ASCS Information Workshops, October 24th - December 2nd:

(Organized and/or conducted and serviced by local people trained at the Mount Beulah workshop.)

A. COUNTY WORKSHOPS - Concentrated activity will probably be limited to about 24 counties with a majority of Negro farmers, cotton as the major crop (most affected by ASCS allotment rulings), and already some movement activity. At these workshops election strategy for the entire county should be determined and plans made for community workshops.

B. COMMUNITY WORKSHOPS - Each county is divided into several ASCS communities with a separate committee election. It is hoped at least one workshop will be held in each community, totaling at the very least, 100 before December 2nd.

C. CANDIDATE EDUCATION WORKSHOPS - A training workshop for nominees from local communities will be held at Mount Beulah November 13-14. It will deal with actual ASCS programs in more detail than other workshops. We hope to have resource people from the Department of Agriculture and others familiar with agricultural economics and government programs relevant to the small Southern farmer. The workshop will prepare people as candidates (and hopefully as committee men) to construct a campaign on issues, thereby helping to educate the people in their communities.
