Within an hour after the bombing there were between one and two hundred people at the Freedom House. The SNCC workers organized the people into a group and they were addressed by Jesse Harris. He said, essentially, this is an attempt to scare us but we're not scared. We will stay. Even if they kill all ten of us, there will be ten more to take our place. Early in the am they found a church in which they could hold a mass meeting and they leafleted the area all day long. At 5pm there was a youth meeting of 30 kids at the Freedom House at which there was talk and singing. At meeting's end, they marched around the bombed site. This occurred before the local police who were there observing. At the mass meeting tonight, there were about 175 people. The church was overflowing. Curtis Hayes spoke and explained that "we will not be turned around." He explained the developing organization of the state. He introduced Rev. McCord from National Council of Churches, who introduced Art Thomas of NCC. Thomas talked about the type of support the NCC would lead to the movement in McComb. Jack Pratt, lawyer for NCC, spoke, followed by Bob Cole, the psychiatrist. Both PRATT AND Cole apologized for their respective professions and pledged their support. Courtland Cox spoke. His speech can be summarized by his quote from Mrs. Hamer: "People in Miss. are sick and tired of being sick and tired." "Now is the time to move." Donna Moses spoke about the convention challenge and freedom registration. Curtis explained the Freedom Schools and the Community Center program. The meeting then ended. Several things should be noted: Mandy feels there was a breakthrough with respect to federal involvement. The FBI dispatched over 15 agents. They're all over the place driving around in their plymouths. At the mass meeting, there were cars all around (FBI cars) in addition to City and County Police cars. There were at least 3 Mississippi police cars (2 County and 1 City car) In addition to the FBI agents, there are two Justice Dept. men who are with the Criminal Division.

After the mass meeting, the staff went to the cafe. Someone came in and reported that there had been a shooting. A car with four white males in it (late model light yellow car) fired on the only Negro police officer in TOWN. The same car had circled the Freedom House
