Mobile St-informally - and whites
6. Number of people visited: 5 whites - 20-24 Negro
7. General Response: from Negroes - some suspicion and fear behind pretended interest, some showed a real desire to talk about their difficulties and problems in obtaining equal rights, and some (younger ones, generally) seemed to show a real desire and need to get acquainted as human beings. Some still treated me, at least initially, as a white man to whom the customary deference was paid.

8. Did you have any contact with white community? Explain. Yes - talked to a minister, a church organist, the C of Commerce exec and a couple of sociology profs (one only briefly). They generally showed what I saw to be extreme defensiveness and alot of the usual prejudices, guised in terms of sophisticated "moderation." One simply would not discuss the issue - the organist was the only one (at 1st Baptist) where I had a real chance to converse.

9. Did you have any contact with police? Explain. No. Carl, I don't know - ask the police.

10. Give your impressions of community, evaluation of your work, what you think can be done.

over for most

I guess I would have appreciated a bit more COFO organization so that I could have done more canvassing and getting around. Dick Kelly was very good about trying to involve us. I must say, and I do understand (I think) the loose organization and the interim leadership situation:
